With professional expertise in both front-end and back-end web development, I bring a versatile and comprehensive advantage to the development team: fully understanding the project on the grand scheme. I've successfully delivered numerous projects, leading the process throughout planning, analysis, design, implementation, testing, deployment, and maintenance.

As a self-motivated and results-driven web developer, my passion is efficient and impactful development: ensuring security and scalability, and ultimately increasing productivity and profitability.

Graduating with all honors from Coding Dojo's Software Development with Python, with a focus on Full-Stack web development using Django, I was able to rapidly learn and apply various skills and technologies. For the past two years, I have further augmented my skills through freelance Full-Stack development and continuous learning and certifications.

Colleagues know me as the "Go to" guy — the one who finds the solution and always delivers. Some of my accomplishments include:

- Developed the infrastructure and forms to communicate with a third-party API, enabling a secure, scalable, and automated processing and analysis of data — resulting in a significant cost savings of $250,000 USD annually for the company
- Trained hundreds of employees on standard operating procedures, best practices, trouble-shooting, and various other job duties
- Built my first webpage before graduating Coding Dojo for Cornerstone Apartment Services, Inc in a language and environment I didn't even study at Coding Dojo
- Coordinated the flow of an international team spanning roughly 12,000 kilometers using git and GitHub for version control

Please note: I'm ready to work. I'm married to a Malaysian, and I have Long Term Social Visit Pass (LTSVP) to live in Malaysia, so I do not require any form of sponsorship to be employed in Malaysia.

My career journey has equipped me with the skills to tackle complex problems both independently and within collaborative team environments.

I am confident that my technical expertise and passion for driving impactful solutions will prove a lasting asset to your company. I would love to discuss how I can meet your goals. I am available at your convenience.

Thank you for considering my application.

Sincerely,
Matthew Summers
